

100% RENEWABLE ENERGY

OFFSHORE WIND

Offshore wind development on Lake Erie could create 3,000 jobs and power 500,000 homes.

BUSINESS LEADERS

Mars, REI, Big G Green and the Pocono Raceway are all being powered by 100% clean energy.

RENEWABLE CITIES

Cities big and small are putting plans in place to go 100% renewable.

It's time to get off Fossil Fuels.

For more than 100 years, Pennsylvania's fossil fuel addiction to dirty coal, oil and gas has left a trail of destruction across our state and world. From scarring our landscapes to polluting our waterways with toxics to making our air unsafe to breathe to the extreme weather of climate change—PA is reaping what it sows due to its historic addiction to dirty fossil fuel energy.

Moving to 100% renewables will slash the climate pollution from power plants and the transportation sector, protecting people now and future generations.

100% Clean, 100% Possible

Healthier communities and a livable future for kids are possible now. Already some of Pennsylvania's largest cities such as Philadelphia, Allentown, and Pittsburgh are committed to going 100% renewable. And they aren't alone—major companies such as Mars, Johnson & Johnson, and Google are on board.

The opportunity is clear. Wind power has grown fivefold over the last decade with new windfarms popping up from the fields of Western Pennsylvania to the Poconos. And, solar now generates enough electricity to power 34,000 homes across the Commonwealth. Now is the time for Pennsylvania to lead.

Join the push for 100%

We are releasing new studies showing how we can achieve 100% renewable energy as quickly as possible. Our organizers and volunteer network are organizing rallies and forums with hundreds of citizens. We're garnering statewide news coverage to heighten awareness about going 100% renewable energy. And we're meeting face-to-face with elected officials to get the policies we need in place to make this vision a reality.

Together, we can make the future a reality—get involved today.

THE PATH TO 100%

PennEnvironment is advocating for a series of bold actions and common sense solutions to build 100% renewables:

- 100% renewables: We're working with a bipartisan group of elected officials in Harrisburg and D.C. on policies that help move the country to 100% renewables by 2050.
- Solar jobs: Solar energy is here and now--and PA needs to be a leader in tapping into it. New legislation would require utilities to meet clean energy requirements with renewables built in Pennsylvania.
- Helping businesses go 100% renewable: Buildings are our biggest energy users. PennEnvironment is pushing for policies to make them more energy-efficient and install renewables.

WE'VE GOT THE POWER

The more citizens, elected officials, business leaders, and health experts join the call for 100% renewables, the sooner Pennsylvania and the nation will get on the right track.

- Research: We're releasing new research reports every year that show how Pennsylvania can get to 100% renewables by 2050.
- Climate Defenders: Hundreds of PennEnvironment supporters are spreading out in communities, meeting with elected officials, and highlighting clean energy solutions in the media, and organizing events to build the momentum we'll need to go 100% renewable.
- Voices for 100: We're mobilizing support from opinion leaders and experts—from the public health experts, business leaders, and more to speak in one voice--Pennsylvanians want to go 100% renewable now. Learn more at www.100%Renewable.org
- Advocacy: We're making the case for 100% renewables in meetings with decision-makers at the local, state and national level.
