

Dear President-elect Donald Trump:

We, the undersigned professionals dedicated to safeguarding and improving public health, write to urge you to tackle the climate crisis as a top priority in your office. As you know, the temperature of the planet is increasing at an alarming rate, with 2016 on track to be the hottest year ever. This is changing our climate and threatening the safety, health, and environment of current and future generations.

With health impacts ranging from heat-related illness and deaths to asthma and respiratory illnesses, and more vector borne diseases, climate change is threatening the health of Americans across the country. You have the power to dramatically cut the greenhouse gas pollution fueling this crisis. We ask you to work to shift towards a 100% renewable energy and efficient future, while phasing out the use of fossil fuels.

As doctors, nurses, medical researchers, and others employed in the health and public health fields, we understand the clear connection between preventing the worst impacts of climate change and human health. None of us want to leave the next generation with epidemic asthma and respiratory illnesses, more heat strokes, and expanded ranges of dangerous insect and water-borne diseases. But that's exactly what climate change is causing today, and it will only get worse unless we act now to drastically cut the pollution fueling the problem.

The risks climate change poses to public health have been well-documented. Thanks to the initiative of the last administration, we know more about the threat that climate change poses to our health than ever before. According to the 2016 Climate and Health Assessment—a project of more than 100 public health experts and climate scientists—climate change poses a significant health risk to every American.<sup>1</sup> For everyone from the young to the elderly, climate change will exacerbate current health threats and create new challenges.

Health damages outlined in the assessment include but are not limited to:

1. Air pollution and airborne allergens will likely increase, worsening allergy and asthma conditions.
2. Extreme heat can be expected to cause an increase in the number of premature deaths, from thousands to tens of thousands, each summer, which will outpace projected decreases in deaths from extreme cold.
3. Warmer winter and spring temperatures are projected to lead to earlier annual onset of Lyme disease cases in the eastern United States and a generally northward expansion of ticks capable of carrying the bacteria that cause Lyme disease.
4. Runoff from more frequent and intense extreme precipitation events, and increased water temperatures, will increasingly compromise recreational waters, shellfish harvesting waters, and sources of drinking water, increasing risks of waterborne illness such as legionella and campylobacter.
5. Climate change, including rising temperatures and changes in weather extremes, is expected to increase the risk of foodborne illnesses. Increased carbon can also decrease the nutritional value of foods, reducing levels of zinc, iron, and protein in wheat, rice, peas, and soybeans<sup>2</sup>.
6. Climate change will have the largest health impact on vulnerable populations including those with low incomes, some communities of color, limited English proficiency and immigrant groups, Indigenous peoples, children, pregnant women, older adults, vulnerable occupational groups, persons with disabilities, and persons with preexisting or chronic medical conditions such as asthma and respiratory disease.

7. Extreme weather and other events related to climate change will impact health by exacerbating underlying medical conditions, increasing exposure to foodborne and waterborne illness risks, and disrupting infrastructure, including power, water, transportation, and communication systems, that are essential to maintaining access to health care and emergency response services and safeguarding human health.<sup>3</sup>

This isn't the world we want for our future. That's why we urge you to tackle the climate crisis by reducing global warming pollution in your presidency. Since fossil fuels such as coal, gas and oil account for the vast majority of U.S. emissions, we urge you to chart a course for a clean and healthy energy future fueled by 100% clean renewable sources and maximizing energy efficiency. Expanding renewable energy and investing in energy efficiency are the best ways to reduce the need for dirty energy sources and secure a safer future for our children. Moreover, action to limit carbon emissions will also help reduce levels of health-threatening soot and smog, making our air healthier to breathe. Because we must prioritize health, these clean renewable approaches should be selected over natural gas and nuclear power.

Natural gas is not clean, from a public health or a climate perspective. Gas production and use, especially horizontal hydraulic fracturing, is associated with local and regional air pollution<sup>4</sup>, adverse birth outcomes<sup>5</sup>, and contamination of drinking water.<sup>6</sup> It also contributes to climate change, and methane leaks could currently be large enough to eliminate any climate advantage over coal.<sup>7</sup> Meanwhile, nuclear power creates radioactive wastes whose dangers persist for thousands of years.<sup>8</sup>

In order to limit the health and environmental impacts of climate change, we encourage you to take the following actions during your first years in office:

1. Support the Clean Power Plan to limit carbon pollution from power plants, which account for 37 percent of U.S. carbon pollution. We call on you to encourage states to craft plans to reach and exceed their carbon reduction goals through the healthiest approach available: clean, renewable energy sources, such as wind and solar power, along with energy efficiency.
2. Maximize investments in clean energy and transportation infrastructure such as solar and wind energy; making new and existing buildings as energy efficient as possible; prioritizing funding for public transit, livable communities and bike and pedestrian projects over highways.
3. Phase out drilling and mining for fossil fuels on our public lands and waters, starting with ending coal leasing, initiating a moratorium and programmatic review for onshore oil and gas leasing, and keeping our Atlantic, Arctic and Pacific coasts off-limits to new oil drilling.
4. Hold the oil and gas industry to the same standards as other industries by closing the Halliburton Loophole and loopholes in the Clean Air Act, Clean Water Act, and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act that risk our clean air and water.

5. Ensure the U.S. maximizes reductions in automobile pollution and fuel consumption by setting the strongest possible fuel economy and greenhouse gas standards for automobiles while encouraging policies and incentives for zero emissions vehicles to fully transition our transportation sector to zero-carbon pollution.

We are doing our part to safeguard the health of our communities. You can do the same by moving our country to a clean energy future as quickly as possible and phasing out the use of dirty fossil fuels. We want to do all we can to protect current and future generations from climate change damages. We want to leave behind a legacy we're proud of, and we know you do too.

Sincerely,
